PENCIL GUITAR

A YouTuber has used 1,200 coloured pencils to build a working electric guitar in the style of a Fender Stratocaster. Burls Art claimed he was “more than satisfied with how it turned out” and posted a video showing the process onto YouTube that has received over 16 million views. The fully functional instrument cost a mere $120 as the artist owned some existing parts which otherwise would have cost an additional $150. Spending two to four hours a day working on the project, Burls Art created the guitar by cutting the pencils in half to create a flat, colourful edge and placing them into a box. The pencils were then glued together with epoxy resin, sanded down and cut into the shape of a guitar from a template. Completing the piece in a few weeks, Burls Art then added the final touches, such as, the strings. A regular Fender Stratocaster can cost between $670 and $2,500, depending on the model.

WORLD'S OLDEST WOMAN

A 116-year-old Japanese woman has officially been recognised as the oldest living person in the world by the Guinness World Records. Kane Tanaka lives in Fukuoka, a southwest city in Japan, and was born on January 2, 1903. Recently honoured by Guinness World Records, Tanaka's family, along with the city mayor, attended the celebration. The previous world record holder was another Japanese woman, named Chiyo Miyako, who passed away at the age of 117. Tanaka revealed that she enjoys playing board games and studying mathematics. The oldest person in the world ever documented was Jeanne Louise Calment, a French woman who, according to Guinness World Records, lived until the impressive age of 122.

WHALE ★ of a Time ★

A deep sea diver escaped being made a meal to a Bryde Whale after he was scooped into the large mammal's mouth. Dive Expert Tour director, Rainer Schimpf, from South Africa, set out with a group of divers to document a sardine run only to face a potentially fatal situation. The team were located 25 nautical miles from the shoreline when the sea began to churn and Schimpf was swallowed by the whale. Incredibly, and to the shock of the team, the creature released the 51-year-old from his mouth and Schimpf swam back to the boat unharmed. The experienced diver said, “there is no time for fear in a situation like that – you have to use your instinct... I held my breath because I thought ‘he is going to dive down and release me much deeper in the ocean’, it was pitch black inside.”

SEAL DUNG DISCOVERY

A group of New Zealand researchers recently found a functioning USB stick containing a series of photos lodged inside a frozen slab of seal poop. The stool specimen had been stored in a freezer for one year before scientists from the National Institute of Water and Atmospheric Research (NIWA) defrosted it to study the health of the leopard seal. The USB included images of sea lions at Porpoise Bay, near Waikawa, with the owner being revealed as Amanda Nally, a volunteer beach walker with the New Zealand Sea Lion Trust. Exactly how the USB stick ended up in the seal dung is a mystery with the NIWA describing it as being surrounded by feathers and bird bones. Nally speculated that "it may have been accidentally dropped by me, then picked up by a seabird, which was in turn eaten by a leopard seal."

FEATHER FOSTERER

On approach to Lyn John's Sydney home, screeches, whistles and tweets get louder and louder with each step. As a foster mother to 60 birds, Lyn's residence features a back patio lined with large animal enclosures, as well as, two rooms that have been transformed into aviaries. Six years ago, Lyn launched her bird foster service and currently works alongside 12 other carers across Sydney. Some of the bird breeds staying with Lyn include a love bird, cockatoos, galahs, lorikeets, Indian ring-necks and a rare, endangered Amazon, named Lola. As a feather fosterer, Lyn's day begins at five-thirty in the morning cleaning the cages and feeding her friends a "gourmet" mix of sweet potato, kale, bok choy, carrot, cauliflower, red cabbage, chia, quinoa, rolled oats, capsicum and squash. Lyn cares for each bird for one year before beginning the re-homing process.

WATERMELON

★ Ham! ★

Queensland farmer, Terry O'Leary, has been championing for watermelons to become an alternative feature to Australian barbecues. O'Leary was inspired after watching a video on social media where "in North America people were spending up to $75 for a watermelon ham." Recently, at the local Chinchilla Watermelon Festival, O'Leary embraced the opportunity to showcase the smoked watermelon delicacy. But how!? To prepare the watermelon ham, the farmer first skins the fruit and soaks it for three days in salty water along with cumin and coriander seeds. The watermelon is scored on top to give it a ham look before smoking it for almost a day. O'Leary recommended baking the watermelon after the smoking process to ensure it cooks through and said, "The saltiness, the sweetness and the smokiness go really well together... It's very soft and melts in your mouth."

ALFIE

★ the Alpaca ★

A couple from Adelaide has experienced surprise social media success following them uploading a video of their pet alpaca, Alfie, onto an Instagram account. In just 24 hours, the footage of the animal gained an additional 50,000 followers with owner, Jeff Cheng, claiming the one-year-old alpaca now has over 182,000 followers from all over the world. Cheng explained they created Alfie's own social media account so they "wouldn't flood our own personal Facebook feeds with photos of an alpaca... It was just somewhere to put all his photos and it has kind of just taken off." Living in the suburban town of Warradale, in Adelaide's southwest, the couple have only owned the alpaca for a few months. Spending days grazing in the backyard, the animal reportedly sleeps inside in the lounge room at night. The original video showing Alfie in his favourite park has now been viewed over 15 million times online.

COLOSSAL CABBAGE

In the remote town of Jackeys Marsh, in Tasmania's Meander Valley, Rosemary Norwood grows vegetables with her partner, Sean Cadman. However, when she posted a photo on social media of a gigantic-sized cabbage from her garden, she did not expect it to be reported via news outlets all over the world. Norwood explained that the cabbage was the first giant vegetable that she had grown and said, "I'm not attempting to grow giant vegetables for the sake of it, we grow vegetables for our guests at our eco-lodge. This one looked like it was doing really well so we left it." The eco-lodge owners and their guests consumed the cabbage over two weeks. However, it will never be known if the vegetable was an actual record-breaker because it was never weighed. Norwood also grows lettuce, beans, peas, carrots, tomatoes, zucchinis, rhubarb and apples.

LIFE SAVING JEANS

When a German yachtsman was knocked overboard into rough seas off the east coast of New Zealand, he managed to fashion his own jeans into a makeshift life jacket which he believes saved his life. Aren Murke was sailing with his brother when the yacht's boom unexpectedly knocked him into the water. The 30-year-old was swept away by the swell, however, with quick thinking created an improvised life vest. Murke removed his jeans and tied knots at the ends of the legs, pulled them over the water to capture air inside and finally forced them under to then trap the air. The jeans kept the sailor afloat for over three hours until a rescue helicopter located and picked him up. Murke told reporters, "Luckily, I knew the trick... without the jeans I wouldn't be here today. They were really the thing that saved me."

BEST BUGGIES

Six of the best sand crawlers available today!

Most of today's SUVs and trucks can handle dirt roads with no probs. But if you really want the high speeds across a desert feels, you're going to have to get something purpose-built for such a task.

Meyers Manx

This is the icon that started it all. Intro'ed in 1964, the Meyers Manx (a VW Beetle refit) single-handedly created the dune buggy category. The company went bankrupt in 1971, but are back with killer options including body kits, new chassis, and even an inexpensive DIY option!

$3400

BMS Sand Sniper T-1500 4S

108 horsepower
$15,500

The BMS Sniper is a different kind of sand beast. For starters, it comes with seating for four rather than two, and its own roof rack. Of course that adds to the weight, but luckily its 108 horsepower allows it to haul all that gear atop while tearing across the desert!

Yamaha YXZ1000R SS SE

90 horsepower
$29,000

This Yamaha is actually a side-by-side and not strictly a dune buggy. We like to call it a side buggy! And this buggy a lot to offer when it comes to sand-shredding including a 998cc power plant, selectable 2WD and 4WD, Fox Racing shocks, and hydraulic disc brakes!

Polaris RZR XP Turbo

This one boasts a whopping 168 horsepower - nearly double the Yamaha - thanks to its 925cc engine. While technically smaller, it is turbocharged and engineered for top-notch performance. On top of that, it also boasts 14" ground clearance, and can be upgraded to a higher trim!

168 horsepower
29,590

Can-Am Maverick X3 X RS Turbo R

This off-road demon features some of the best tech in the game! With 124 foot-pounds of torque, a trio of oversized air intakes, 24 inch BRP four-link TTX suspension, and fully-adjustable state-of-the-art Fox shocks that lets you customize on the fly - this is one lit buggy!

172 horsepower
$38,500

Howe & Howe Ripsaw

Okay, this is technically a luxury off-road tank. But they are very buggy-like, able to handle the harshest of terrains, just at more insanely high speeds with power up to 1500 horses. This is one extreme off-roader built with comfort and luxury in mind. Good luck getting one though!

1500 horsepower

Largest LEGO® brick sculpture (number of bricks)

The largest LEGO® sculpture created to date is a model of the Tower Bridge. A total of 5,805,846 bricks were used in its construction. It measures 44 m (144 ft 4.28 in) in width and 13 m (42 ft 7.81 in) in height. It was built by Land Rover (UK) to reveal the new Discovery at Packington Hall, Solihull, UK, on 28 September 2016. It took one year to develop from start to finish and the build itself took seven months. Over 100 people were involved in creating the structure, including a team of 28 dedicated LEGO builders.

Largest LEGO® brick cherry blossom tree (supported)

This successful attempt was achieved at LEGOLAND® Japan – the Nagoya-based theme park wanted to celebrate its first anniversary with style by creating a Japanesque work using LEGO® blocks. The tree was designed and built by a team of staff in the Czech Republic. After more than 6,700 hours of hard work, the LEGO® tree was shipped to Japan for final assembly. The tree also features a set of lanterns (made of LEGO®), which light up during the evening.

Largest LEGO® brick Batmobile sculpture

The largest LEGO® brick Batmobile measures 1.30 m (4 ft 3 in) tall, 5.51 m (18 ft 0 in) long and 1.69 m (5 ft 6 in) wide and was achieved by Nathan Sawaya (USA) as measured in London, UK, on 28 February 2017.

Largest LEGO® brick caravan

The largest LEGO® brick caravan consists of 288,630 individual bricks, achieved by Ben "The Brick Builder", sponsored by Caravanning Queensland and Top Parks from a concept by John Cochrane Advertising (all Australia) in Brisbane, Queensland, Australia, on 26 September 2018. The concept to attempt this title came from John Cochrane Advertising who wanted to celebrate the 50th anniversary Queensland Caravanning and Camping Show with "Something Big." Ben Craig was commissioned shortly after to start the design and building process, while Caravanning Queensland and Top Parks got involved to sponsor the project. The LEGO® brick caravan was modelled after a 1973 Viscount Royale and was fully furnished with stove-top, refrigerator, sink with running water, checkers board, drawers with silverware and even a tub of Vegemite made from LEGO® bricks. Ben once accidentally locked himself into his workshop and had to sleep overnight on the LEGO® brick bed.

Tallest structure built with LEGO® bricks

The tallest structure built with interlocking plastic bricks measured 35.05 m (114 ft 11 in) and was achieved by Lego Italia (Italy), in Milan, Italy, on 21 June 2015. An estimated 550,000 LEGO® bricks were used to complete the tower. Each tiny LEGO® brick has been an important contributor to reach the record, just as everyday actions are important to build a better future. As a symbol of this idea, the LEGO Group donated 7 Euros (about $11 Aussie) for every centimeter built of the tower to Urban Oasis – a project, which focuses on the protection and development of Urban Oasis in collaboration with the World Wildlife Fund (WWF). The event took place from June 17th to June 21st and was visited by more than 50,000 spectators 18,000 keen builders. Children and grown-ups had fun in the free play area where they as part of the building activity also received simple and effective advice on how to preserve our planet.

Largest LEGO® brick skeleton

At 6 m in length and comprising 80,020 pieces, Dinosaur Skeleton by Nathan Sawaya (USA) is an actual-size skeleton of the dinosaur Tyrannosaurus rex – the largest complete skeleton made from LEGO bricks. The T-rex featured as the largest item in Sawaya's touring exhibition, The Art of the Brick, and was built over the summer of 2011

"in honour of the thousands of children who enjoy the art of LEGO building." Nathan says that it took him a whole summer to build it. New York-based artist Nathan is best known for his colourful and witty creations from LEGO, and is recognized by the manufacturer as a LEGO Master Builder and Certified Professional. His trademark 3D portraits include such cultural icons as Elvis Presley, Superman and Lady Gaga, as well as his own concepts: for example, a skeleton, Mr Bones, captured in the act of draping a blue "skin" (of bricks, naturally) around his bones; and a Melting Man of transparent bricks.

THE FORT

Keeping up with the ever-changing world of Fortnite Battle Royale.

Season 8 has started Fortnite fans! If you haven't jumped on for a while, it's well worth getting back into the swing of Battle Royale as the changes have been epic. Just before the end of a Season 7, the world started to shake and rumble, and cracks started appearing. The Prisoner, who had been chained up in the ice castle of Polar Peak, escaped and disappeared somewhere, too. We all knew something big was going to go down, but we could have never predicted what would happen.

At the start of Season 8, a massive volcano thrust its way out of the ground where Wailing Woods used to be. This huge volcano is the lair of The Prisoner, and you can climb right inside of it to find stacks of loot. Around the volcano there is a river of lava plus a new Jungle biome appeared. There is also an all new town called Sunny Steps. Filled with pyramids and big underground areas, it's one of our favourite locations on the map.

The other big change occurred where Lazy Links used to be. Water came rushing in from the sea and created a big lagoon. This new Lazy Lagoon area has been discovered by pirates, who have docked a big pirate ship there and set up a camp. This fantastic new spot allows you to fight and loot outside and inside the ship, as well as the surrounding area.

The pirates also brought Pirate Cannons, which are like a new vehicle. You can move them around like a shopping trolley and not only fire out cannon balls to wreck damage on players and structures, but also shoot out yourself or your teammates. This becomes a great new tool in team strategies when trying to move about the map or get around enemy positions.

There is a stack more in Season 8, too. If you want a detailed breakdown of all the changes and a heap of tips and guides, make sure you pick up our Fortnite magazine. You will find it in your nearest newsagent or supermarket.

FRESH PICS

A stack of new games have been revealed this month, let's take a closer look at them.

ASTRAL CHAIN (SWITCH)

Coming exclusively to the Switch, Astral Chain is the next release from developer PlatinumGames. This developer is famous for its super fun, stylish and fast combat in games like Bayonetta, Nier: Automata, The Legend of Korra and more. Not due out till late August, the combat already looks super slick. Mixing in ranged and close-quarters moves, you can link together some epic combos. As you can see, the visual style looks neat, too.

TRINE 4: THE NIGHTMARE PRINCE (PC, PS4, XBO, SWITCH)

We're very excited about the return of this awesome physics-based platformer series. With its amazing fantasy world, fun puzzles and cool three-player co-op action, why wouldn't we be? This fourth game will return to the side-on style of play that worked so well with the first two games, but obviously the visuals are now even better. We're told the game will be coming in spring, too, so not that long to wait.

MARVEL ULTIMATE ALLIANCE 3: THE BLACK ORDER (SWITCH)

This has quickly become one of our most anticipated games of 2019. Just announced, and returning after a ten year gap, the next Marvel Ultimate Alliance game will be exclusive to the Switch. It's being made by Team Ninja, who made Hyrule Warriors, and the Ninja Gaiden games. Played from a kind of top down but side on view, you assemble a team of Marvel characters and then use their unique powers to battle past enemies either solo or with friends.

LITTLE FRIENDS: DOGS & CATS (SWITCH)

Remember the game Nintendogs? Well this is a new game that's not made by that developer, but looking very similar indeed. It's a pet simulator, where you get your own little cat or dog and then need to look after it. That includes feeding it, playing with it, dressing it up and even training it. You also have to take it for walks and keep it happy and healthy. Managing your virtual pet is good practice and could help you convince your parents to get you a real cat or dog!

AUDICA (PC)

Famous developer Harmonix is the king of the music rhythm genre. These are the guys that created Dance Central, Guitar Hero, Rock Band and Amplitude. They've just revealed that their next music game will be a virtual reality shooter. You wield a gun in each hand and have to shoot colourful targets as they appear and the ring around them closes in. Do it right and the music will play correctly. This is going to be so immersive when it arrives sometime this year!

SPLITGATE: ARENA WARFARE (PC)

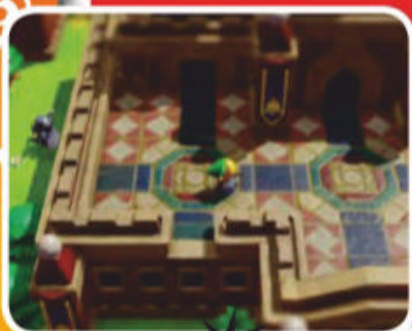

Could this be the next big online shooter? It's made by a bunch of guys that worked on the great Halo 3. It definitely looks and feels like an old-school shooter, with fast gameplay, a sci-fi setting and the ability to go up and down large vertical battle arenas. The big difference here is that you are armed with a portal, allowing you to shoot a whole in the wall or floor, and then jump straight through it to appear in another part of the map. Should be an amazing way to flank opponents or escape from enemies.

NINTENDO'S NEWS BOMB!

Every now and again Nintendo drops a whole lot of incredibly exciting news in one big announcement. They famous developer just did it again and here is everything that was revealed.

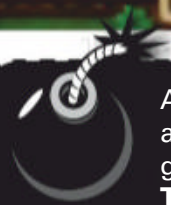

Let's start with a big one! We now know what the next Zelda game will be on the Switch, and while it is not a new game, it is still very exciting indeed. Originally releasing on the Game Boy back in 1993, The Legend of Zelda: Link's Awakening is one of the most beloved games in the series thanks to its immersive adventuring. It's a top-down, rather than third-person, Zelda experience, but it has been completely redone for the modern Switch and looks awesome!

We found out that Super Mario Maker 2 is coming, with the sequel set to hit the Switch in June. It will include new gameplay additions like slopes, and more objects to use from new games like Super Mario 3D World.

The next big Super Smash Bros. Ultimate update will come in autumn, most likely around the end of April. Alongside it we'll get the DLC Challenger Pack, which adds Joker as a character, a Joker level and Joker music to the game. That's Joker from the Persona games by the way, not Joker the comic villain. Five new Amiibo based on the series were also confirmed in Snake, Simon, Squirtle, Pokémon Trainer, and Ivysaur.

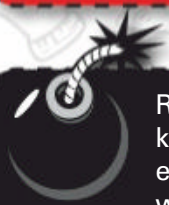

A free update has come to the awesome puzzle-adventure game Captain Toad: Treasure Tracker, which adds in co-op play. Epic!

DID YOU KNOW?

A new version of Tetris has arrived on the Switch. Called Tetris 99, this is a battle royale spin-off of the game, with 99 people playing Tetris against each other at the same time.

Racing fans will be excited to know that one of our favourite ever racers, GRID: Autosport, will be arriving on the Switch console sometime in winter. The game has one of the best AIs ever, with the computer really giving you a stiff challenge to race against.

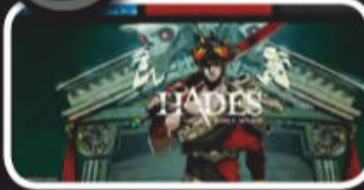

By the time you read this, the cute platformer Unravel 2 will have arrived on the Switch. In it you play as a creature made out of yarn using his own body to get past objects.

Dragon Quest XI: Echoes of an Elusive Age will be out on Switch in spring, after already bringing its huge, colourful, RPG experience to PS4 and PC in 2018.

This joined with the news that Dragon Quest Builders 2, which is like Minecraft meeting an RPG, will be out in July. You build and craft whatever you want, but also have a story to follow.

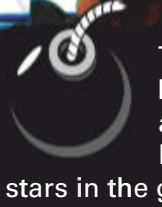

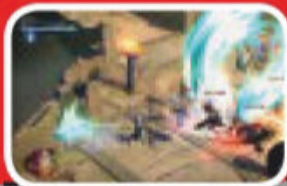

By the time you read this, three classic Final Fantasy games will be available on the Switch. This includes the legendary Final Fantasy VII, alongside Final Fantasy IX and Chocobo's Mystery Dungeon: Every Buddy. The latter was originally named Final Fantasy Fables: Chocobo's Dungeon when it came out on Wii in 2007.

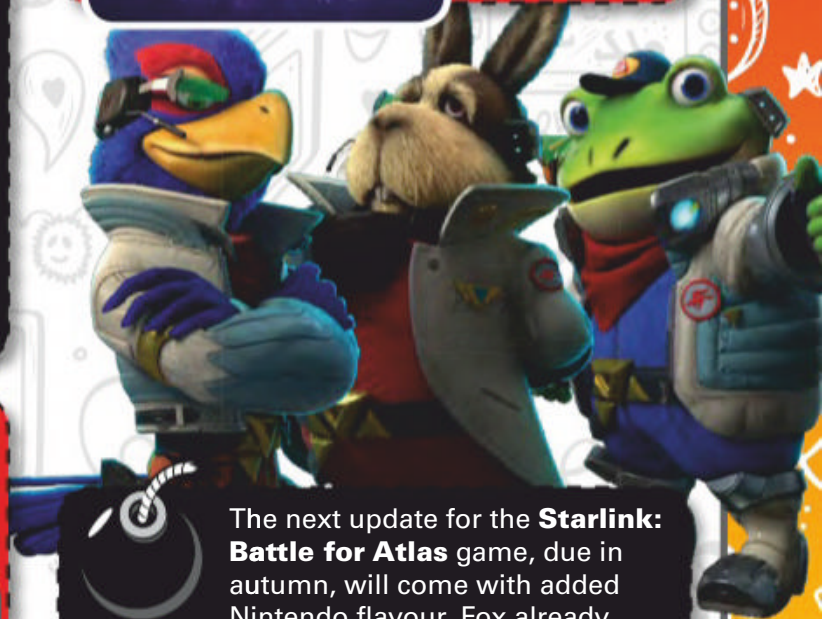

Oninaki is the name of the next game from developer Tokyo RPG Factory, who made the old-school gems I Am Setsuna and Lost Sphear. It will be coming to the Switch, but no release date was given.

The next update for the Starlink: Battle for Atlas game, due in autumn, will come with added Nintendo flavour. Fox already stars in the game, but he will be joined by Peppy, Falco, and Slippy – all from the StarFox series – who will be playable pilots.

POKÉMON SHIELD AND SWORD

In hugely exciting news, the next main game in the Pokémon series has been revealed and it's looking incredible. In fact, it feels a lot like The Legend of Zelda: Breath of the Wild, with a huge open world for trainers to explore, coming across random battles with Pokémon that can be fought and caught. As we've become used to, there will be two versions of the game – one called Sword and one called Shield- that offer differences in the types of creatures you can collect. The three new starter Pokémon are also quite interesting - the grass-type Grookey, fire-type Scorbunny and water-type Sobble – as they almost appear as if they work well together. Expect the game to release in late 2019.

KRASH

PROFESSOR
FATSHADY

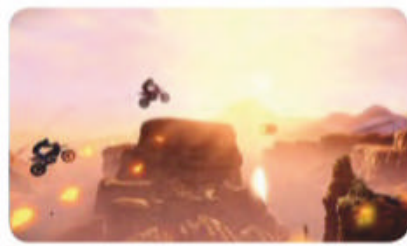

The crazy level design and perfect physics have made motorbike platformer Trials a huge hit with gamers. This month we caught up with Professor FatShady who runs the best Trials lessons on YouTube. He told us not only what he thinks of the latest game, Trials Rising, but also had some great tips for KRASH Heads who want to become pro streamers.

WHY DID YOU FALL IN LOVE WITH THE TRIALS GAMES?

Firstly, Trials games are fun. They look great and allow for some fast racing and awesome crashes. When I started out, a few of my friends had the game so I just wanted to beat their times. Then they would beat you again and you'd go back and forth to see who could get the fastest time. It was that sense of competition among friends that initially made me love it.

WHERE DO YOU THINK THE LATEST RELEASE, RISING, RANKS AMONG THE OTHER TRIALS GAMES?

Trials Evolution from 2012 is often said to be the "best" because of its gritty design and great gameplay. But I think Trials Rising is shaping up to be even better. Not only does it have a gritty, dirt bike feel to it, but there is cross platform leaderboards, tandem bikes (two people riding the same bike), and 8,000 objects in the level editor. I'm a huge fan of the customisation options, too.

HOW DID YOU SHIFT FROM BEING A FAN TO A YOUTUBE STAR?

I started my YouTube channel four years after I started playing Trials. After I got good some of my friends started asking me for tips and I realised that no-one was really teaching others how to play this game. So I started sharing my enjoyment of the series by helping other players with video lessons.

DO YOU NEED TO BE GOOD AT A GAME TO BE ABLE TO BECOME A SUCCESSFUL YOUTUBER?

I don't think so. Many of your favourite YouTubers are successful because they are funny while being bad at games! My view has always been that the key to YouTube is to firstly be passionate about what you play. If you really enjoy it, it will come across to the viewers. Secondly, you need to be able to stand out from the crowd. Ask yourself; "why would someone watch me?"

WHAT KIND OF EQUIPMENT DO YOU NEED TO GET STARTED?

When I made my first Trials video, I put my phone on a box and pointed it at the screen. It wasn't pretty, but it proved what I was doing could work. So you can start small to test your ideas and if they are worthwhile, then consider improving what you use. At this point the first thing you need is a good microphone as it makes you sound professional. Then you get a video capture device and a webcam. Finally good lighting.

For those starting out, I recommend the Open Broadcasting Software (OBS) as it will let you create a scene with gameplay, webcam and microphone, and record it in one session. Video editing is something that will take longer to learn, so if you just want to quickly capture yourself, this is what I would use.

WHAT KIND OF TRIALS CONTENT IS THE MOST FUN TO MAKE AND WHY?

People will respond to the energy you bring so I try to only make content about things I truly enjoy. So sometimes it'll be me teaching a lesson, other times going for a personal best or interviewing interesting people in the Trials community. I find that variety, even when focussed on one game, is key.

AFTER MAKING SO MANY COOL VIDEOS, THE DEVELOPER OF TRIALS ACTUALLY GOT YOU INVOLVED WITH MAKING THE SERIES. HOW AWESOME WAS THAT?

That was incredible. I had been making Trials videos for about three years, but had never worked on a game before, so it was a new experience. It was very hard work, but I would do it again tomorrow if they asked me.

I had some strong ideas about how the tutorials could be improved. I provided input on the design of the tutorials, the level design, and I wrote the scripts and did the voiceovers in game. Plus my YouTube channel, the University of Trials, has a real place within the game.

IF YOU WERE IN COMPLETE CONTROL OF TRIALS, WHAT WOULD YOU ADD OR DO IN THE NEXT GAME?

I have always asked for a unicycle, but so far they haven't listened to me! If they gave me control, I would have every crazy bike I could imagine, mostly for the fun and challenge of playing them in multiplayer.

GameSta runs his thumbs over the most exciting new releases this month.

NINTENDO LABO VR KIT

DID YOU KNOW?

The VR Kit is the fourth kit to come to the Nintendo Labo series.

We had been wondering for a long time if Nintendo would jump into the virtual reality scene and all of sudden it's happened. This is not the full, premium VR experience that we see with PSVR, but more similar to the VR we see with mobile phones. Like the other Nintendo Labo kits, it requires you to build the headset first from the cardboard-like materials supplied with the game. Depending on whether you get the base kit, or the full kit, you can then build other objects to use in the VR games that are supplied. The Blaster is in both kits, while the full kit also has a Camera, Bird, Wind Pedal and Elephant. It's a neat idea and it's such a unique experience being able to build something and then use it in a game. While the games themselves are relatively basic minigame like experiences. Just understand it's not as immersive and mind-blowing as the full VR experience we see on PlayStation and PC.

GAMESTA VERDICT: BUILD AND PLAY

SUPER DRAGON BALL HEROES WORLD MISSION

This spin-off to the Dragon Ball series takes a far more different approach to the gameplay than the usual fighting games. It's a card game at its heart, with RPG mechanics and quick-time event combat. The game stars a new hero called Beat, although familiar faces like Goku, Trunks and Vegeta do appear in the story. Beat himself is from Hero Town and he competes in the Super Dragon Ball Heroes card game tournaments, but things get crazy when the fights from the card game start happening in his real life. Combat is very different, with you playing seven characters into a fight and then managing who battles and when.

There are numerous different dragon balls in play, and when the moves are unleashed it's as spectacular as we've come to expect from the main Dragon Ball games. There are minigame like ways of adding skill to some moves, too. All up it's a super interesting new way for fans to experience this series.

OBJECTS IN SPACE

PC

Made right here in Australia, Objects in Space is a unique, if old-school, space trading simulator. At first it seems very simple, but then it sucks you in with its incredible depth and surprising story elements. The gameplay itself unfolds like a point-and-click adventure, but also like a management game. Depending on what kind of ship you are piloting, you can move through different areas so you can access panels that give you vital information. Switching between these rooms is how you manage all the systems that keep your spaceship performing optimally, as well as doing repairs. There is a lot to think about, and balancing everything while also dealing with random things that happen in space – like pirates, anomalies, low resources and so forth – is addictive. You can also land at space stations to find jobs and sell or buy items that can make you a better trader. The visual style is very basic and it can take a while to get used to this style of play, but it is worth it.

Flat Earth Games, who made Objects in Space, also made the excellent Towncraft!

TREASURE STACK

PC, XBO, SWITCH

We love a good puzzle game and this little retro indie title is really cool. Similar to Tetris, it involves treasure chests falling down from above. You then to pick these up and move them around so that they don't pile too high. If any stack reaches the top for too long, it's game over. But luckily if you pick up a chest, you pick up everything piled on top of it, too. As well as coloured chests, coloured keys also fall down. If you match the colour of a key with a chest, it will make both disappear. Where it gets cool is that any chest of the same colour touching that chest will also disappear. This allows you to pile up chests of the same colour to try and create big combos. Adding to the fun are random weapon and item drops that allow you take out groups of chests, plus evil blocks that appear at random to throw out your strategy. It's simple gameplay, but a stack of fun, especially with friends in multiplayer.

ETERNITY: THE LAST UNICORN

PC, PS4

If you're looking for a big new action RPG to immerse yourself in, this new indie game is well worth a look. It's set in Norse mythology, which is like a combination of the medieval Viking world with fantasy elements. You play as an elf who must save eleven kind from a dreadful curse by rescuing the last of the unicorns. Sometimes the story also switches to another character, a Viking, to help mix up the action – although sadly there is no co-op. This is a full, 3D experience, with a detailed world to explore. There's a suite of RPG mechanics, asking you to upgrade and level-up your characters as you go. Combat occurs in real-time, with typical light, heavy and special attacks, as well as a dodge roll. There are boss battles to take on as well, but we wouldn't call this a particularly tough game. It is an indie title, too, so you need to be ready for some simple visual and movement elements, and some dodgy camera angles. But this shouldn't stop you from checking it out.

KINGDOM HEARTS: THE STORY SO FAR

PS4

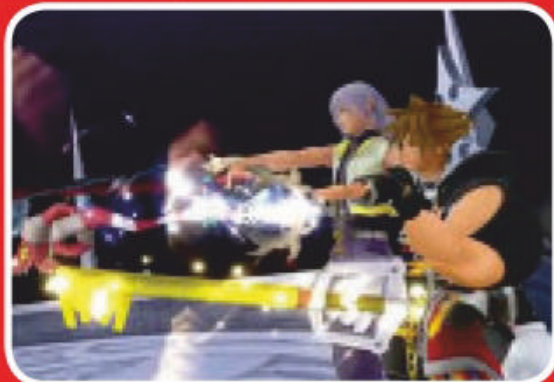

If you've fallen in love with the just released Kingdom Hearts III then you may want to play the rest of the story. The series has been unfolding for decades and there are hundreds of hours of gameplay to enjoy from the previous games, all of which are now in one place. This collection – which is less than $70 – includes a whopping eight games and one movie. This includes the latest

HD remastered versions of Kingdom Hearts I and Kingdom Hearts II, as well as the spin-offs Re:Chain of Memories, 358/2 Days, Birth by Sleep, Re:coded, Dream Drop Distance and Birth by Sleep: A fragmentary passage. It's an incredible amount of gaming, but you do have to realise that despite being remastered, some of these games first came out a long time ago. So they're not quite as polished as Kingdom Hearts III and have old-school gameplay (especially in the combat). However, if you're a fan of RPGs, it's still incredible value.

DID YOU KNOW?

Kingdom Hearts is made by the same studio who make Final Fantasy and Dragon Quest.

ROMAN

After several months off fighting leukaemia, four-time WWE champion Roman Reigns has returned to the ring just in time for WrestleMania 35.

KRASH: How have fans welcomed you back?

ROMAN: The thing that proves this whole WWE Universe is really a family is that it didn't matter whether fans liked the Roman Reigns character or not — everyone sent a lot of positivity my way. In real life, you see family and friends sticking up for each other and protecting each other against outsiders. In this case, the outsider was cancer and everyone in the WWE family was on my side.

KRASH: Do you have an opponent in mind for WrestleMania 35 on 7 April?

ROMAN: At this point I think it's just the big dog open challenge. If anybody wants to wrestle a guy who has been in WrestleMania quite a few times then I'm your guy. I don't see myself in a title picture and, if it'd been anyone else other than Seth I would've been busted up in that Universal Championship zone, but I have a deep respect for Seth's journey and nobody is rooting for him more than me. I'm just happy to pull my card, punch my time and go to work at the greatest live event of all time.

KRASH: And where do you want to be on the card for WrestleMania 36 in your home state of Florida?

ROMAN: I'd like to close the show and wrestle Seth Rollins for the International Championship. I'd like to get my rematch one year from now.

RETURNS

KRASH: How do you feel about Becky Lynch being one of the top Superstars in the WWE and possibly main-eventing WrestleMania?

ROMAN: I have a daughter who is 11 years old and she's at a time in her life now where she's easily influenced. Why not have these strong, extraordinary women showing her that she can do anything? If women can handle giving birth and all the crazy things that come along with creating life and taking care of us, why can't they main-event a sports entertainment show? They can do everything else that's super-hard in this world!

KRASH: Now you're back in WWE, what are your goals?

ROMAN: I think when you get used to something and you feel comfortable in a situation you want to return to that. For me, that means being the guy who watches over this place and being the big dog that runs the yard. From a personal standpoint, it's been a weird few months where we know Roman but we've also met Joe. But the main goal has always been to leave the WWE better than I found it.

KRASH: After wrestling, could you see yourself acting in Hollywood movies like your cousin The Rock?

ROMAN: I think making movies would be a natural transition. I have a great fan base so I would be bringing a following to any project I go to after this but right now I'm focused on making my WWE comeback official.

BRING IT ON BAYLEY

As the first bearers of the WWE Women's Tag Team Championship, Sasha Banks and Bayley have vowed to defend their titles against anyone on Raw, SmackDown LIVE or NXT.

KRASH: What does it mean to you to have won WWE's first ever Women's Tag Team Championship with Sasha?

BAYLEY: It's a dream come true — we did it! Now when girls watch us and they watch wrestling, and if they're watching with their best friend, they can be like 'Dude, that could be us — we could be Tag Team Champions!' They have something to work for together and that's how Sasha and I were when we met. It's so amazing to have achieved this with my best friend. Sasha and I talk every day, whether we're at work or not. She's come and spent a week with my fiancé and I in Austin, Texas, and I've stayed at her and her husband's home in Orlando many times.

KRASH: What's next for you both?

BAYLEY: We're working on developing the division and getting some really solid tag teams together and that includes Raw, SmackDown LIVE and NXT. I think that's a really big deal for women in wrestling and something new to look forward to. And, of course, we want to be main-eventing all the shows just like the guys.

KRASH: How does it feel that it looks like the WrestleMania 35 main event will be Ronda Rousey vs Becky Lynch vs Charlotte?

BAYLEY: That's been our goal the whole time. The fact we are very close to it happening is just an insane feeling. I'm not going to believe it until it actually happens. I just love that it's come this far.

KRASH: Who would you like to go up against to defend the Tag Team Championship?

BAYLEY: We'd really like to defend the title against The Ilconics because they've been best friends since they were teenagers and they started in the WWE together too. I know they feel like they have a lot to prove, so I think it would be a really cool match.

KRASH: What was it like to see Roman Reigns return to action after taking time off to fight cancer?

BAYLEY: It was very emotional. He's such a loved person and we were just so happy to see him. Sasha and I have a jokey relationship with Roman where he makes fun of us for being around each other all the time and being like goofball sisters, so when he saw us he was like 'There you are, together again!'. It was so good to hear he was coming back — everybody was teary-eyed!

KRASH: Even best friends can be annoying sometimes — what's Sasha's worst habit...?

BAYLEY: She's very hard on herself and doesn't let things go easily. I'm very much the opposite. That's why we gel together so well. She would probably say my worst habit is that I sleep in later than her and she hates that because she's an early bird.

KRASH: If WWE announce a tour to Australia, will you come?

BAYLEY: I would love to come to Australia. I've never been. Last year when we were set to go on tour is when I separated my shoulder, so I was taken off the roster. I would love to go to Australia and perform!

FREAK OUT

YOU BOUGH WHAT?

These freaky eBay sales seem too bizarre to be true, but here's proof life can be stranger than fiction...

GRANDMA

Sick of the big gummy smooch your gran gives you? Or the way she pinches your cheeks and says 'Aren't you cuuuute?'. Well, one 10-year-old girl from England, Zoe Pemberton, thought she had the perfect solution – selling her gran on eBay! The little girl described her grandmother as 'annoying' but 'cuddly'. There were quite a few offers but eBay pulled the plug on the sale because it breached regulations on human trafficking.

BRITNEY SPEARS' BUBBLE GUM

No kidding, a woman sold a piece of bubble gum that Britney Spears had chewed and spat out at a concert for $263. Note to self: next time a celebrity is within spitting distance remember to pick up their piece of chewed gum, snotty tissue or fallen eyelash.

GHOST IN A JAR: PICTURE THIS

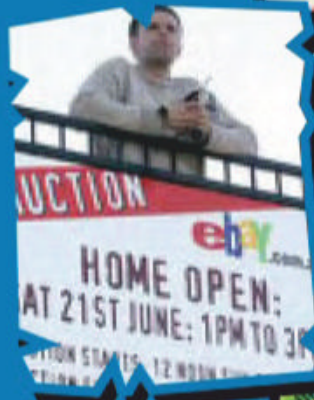

You are out metal detecting... in a cemetery... and find a cool empty jar. You take it home but, horror, it's haunted. What to do? Well one man caught in this situation put his 'ghost in a jar' up for sale on eBay and sold it for a whopping $50,922. Word is, though, the winning bidder did not pay. Darn jar must have been cursed too!

A MAN'S WHOLE LIFE

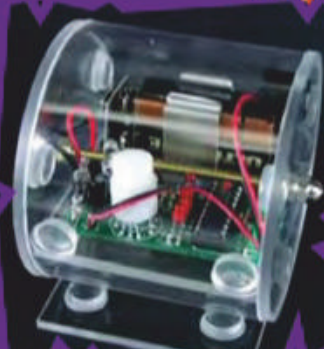

Most people sell their old clothes or stuff they've made on eBay but some sellers think bigger picture. One Briton living in Australia thought bigger picture than that.

Ian Usher was so fed up with his life that he decided to put the whole lot up for auction on eBay after splitting up with his wife. The auction included his house and its contents, car, job, motorcycle, jet ski and friends. He pocketed just over $200,000 and got a fresh start!

UFO DETECTOR

A Brazilian company claimed to have invented the first ever UFO detector. Rather than present their invention to the media and experts as an historical breakthrough which could revolutionise the world as we know it, they decided to stick it on eBay. A buyer did fall for it though and forked out $135.03 to buy it. It is not known whether the item has worked yet but since there hasn't been any reports of contact with E.T on the news lately we're guessing it didn't.

IMAGINARY FRIEND

Got an imaginary friend? Wish you had some more pocket money? Well, you might be on to something there. A UK man sold off his imaginary friend 'Jon' on eBay for more than $3000. He said that, at 27 years of age, he felt he was outgrowing his childhood buddy. Along with the invisible friend (who was pictured on eBay and viewable only by those with a great imagination), the buyer got a list of their new pals' likes and dislikes. Handy!

CAPTAIN KIRK'S KIDNEY STONE

If you think the aliens from Star Trek are freaky wait till you hear this... When legendary Star Trek actor William Shatner passed a kidney stone he asked the hospital if he could keep it. Rather than throw the ugly item in the medical waste bin, Will put it on eBay to raise money for charity. The Golden Palace casino bid $75,000 to beam it up. Now that kind of thinking is what made him captain material!

E.T CEREAL

Ever thought how much that Cornflake or Nutri-Grain looks like a rabbit, your mum or an alien? Chris Doyle did. In December 2004 he sold a single piece of Nutri-Grain on eBay for $1035. It had a resemblance to the character E.T from the Steven Spielberg movie. Not bad for a box of cereal that cost under $10.

PRANK

Trick your friends and family with our black list of classic pranks.

THE PRANK: CHOC CHIP FAKE OUT

THE SET UP: The next time you have some left over mashed potato after dinner, swipe it and put it into the fridge overnight. In the morning when the potato is cold and stiff, use a spoon to shape it into biscuit shapes. Then cut up some dates so they look like chocolate chips and press them into the biscuits. Offer your delicious chocolate chip biscuits to your family and watch their faces when they get a mouthful of cold mashed potato!

THE PUNISHMENT: You might be put on kitchen clean up duty – and expect a revenge prank!

TOOL KIT

- ☐ Some mashed potato
- ☐ Dates

LAUGH METER

THE PRANK: THE HIDDEN DOLLAR

THE SET UP: You'll have to sacrifice a five-dollar note for this prank, but it's well worth it for the laughs. Cut the corner off a five-dollar note and carefully sticky tape it to a blank piece of paper. Grab a pen and write a note on the blank paper like 'Caught you red handed!'. Slip the paper into one of your textbooks so just the corner of the five-dollar note is sticking out past the pages. Then place the book on your desk at school and wait until one of your mates tries to swipe the money only to find your note attached!

THE PUNISHMENT: Don't laugh too hard in class or you'll be up for a detention.

TOOL KIT

- ☐ A five-dollar note
- ☐ a pair of scissors
- ☐ a piece of paper
- ☐ some tape
- ☐ a textbook

LAUGH METER

THE PRANK: STRAW SUCKER

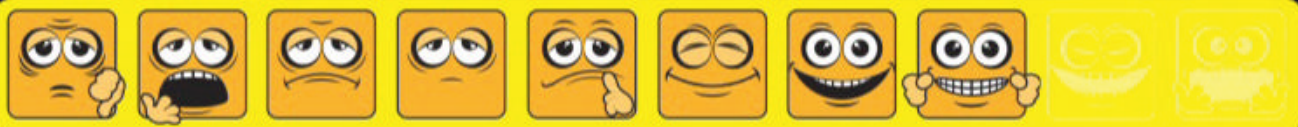

TOOL KIT

- ☐ A packet of drinking straws
- ☐ Marshmallows
- ☐ A toothpick.

THE SET UP: Take a packet of drinking straws and pinch off little pieces of marshmallow that will fit inside the straws. Press the marshmallow pieces into the straws with a toothpick and put them back into the packet. The next time someone grabs a straw they'll have no idea why it won't work!

THE PUNISHMENT: Your victim should see the funny side of this one – but there will likely be a revenge prank on the way.

LAUGH METER

THE PRANK: MOUSE POO PLAGUE

THE SET UP: Grab a bunch of uncooked rice grains and colour them with a black texta. What do you have? Instant mouse poo! Where is it going? Into your mum and dad's bed! When they're not watching, sneak into their bedroom, carefully pull back the covers and place the 'mouse poo' in the centre of their bed. Then all you have to do is wait for the screams at bedtime!

THE PUNISHMENT: Make sure you let the ink dry on the rice so it doesn't stain their sheets. If you don't, expect some major punishment!

TOOL KIT

- ☐ Some uncooked rice
- ☐ A black texta

LAUGH METER

THE PRANK: THE WINDEX CHUG

THE SET UP: Empty a spray bottle of window cleaner and wash it out really well with dishwashing liquid. Dry the bottle and fill it with a blue sports drink. When your family is sitting around watching TV, casually walk into the room and start taking sips of the fake window cleaner. Your parents will completely freak out!

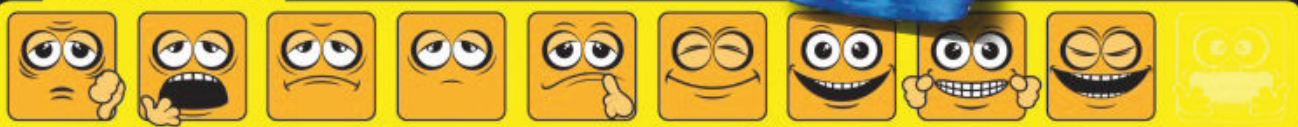

THE PUNISHMENT: You might catch some strife for wasting the window cleaner, but the extra chores will be worth the laughs.

TOOL KIT

- ☐ A spray bottle of window cleaner
- ☐ dishwashing liquid
- ☐ A blue sports drink.

BACK TO BASICS

TURNING FRONT SIDE
& BACK SIDE WITH SPEED

SIDE

THIS IS THE BASICS.
LOTS AND LOTS OF PRACTICE. THE
FASTER YOU CAN PUSH, THE FURTHER
YOU'LL TRAVEL AND THE MORE FUN IT IS.

Turning back side, simply means that your back is facing the ramp as you turn. This is the easier of the two turns, start with back side. Be sure to have your feet on the board correctly. The same amount of toe and heel hanging off the edge of the board. The aim is to now skate with speed and then turn by leaning your entire body over. Push fast, start by leaning your weight onto your toes, bend your knees, put your arms out for balance and most importantly turn your head, look where you want to go. When you come out of a turn, straighten your legs out for more drive.

Turning front side, simply means that your front is facing the ramp as you turn. Again be sure to have your feet on the board correctly. Skate with speed and then turn by leaning your entire body over. Front side turning has always been the hardest way to turn for most people, the same goes for surfing and snowboarding. But once you get it, it becomes the most exciting way to turn. The most important key here is to turn your head over your shoulder, look where you want to go. Get your leading arm out and point with your fingers where you want to go, this will help turn your upper body around. When you come out of a turn, straighten your legs out for more drive.

SHAME SHACK

Geez KRASH Headz. You are one crazy bunch! Check out these 100% REAL stories!

SHAME OF THE MONTH

I was riding with my friends and we found this really big jump that went in to the water. We thought 'let's do it!' My friend Vinnie went first and went straight into the water. Then Shorty did it and he landed it. Then it was my turn. I was riding at top speed, but as I went over the jump I went over the handlebars and SPLAT! I did a belly flop.

Wayne

One day when I was playing soccer at my school a boy on the other team tripped me up so I kicked him as hard as I could in the shin. He went to get my teacher, and as my teacher was coming over another boy from the other team tripped me. I tried to throw the ball at him to get him back, but when the ball was flying through the air he ducked and I hit my male teacher who was standing right behind him in his b@!!$. I had detention for the whole lunch time for a week and missed out on soccer for a month. I also had to stand up in front of the whole school at assembly. Aaron

It all happened at a school assembly. There was all the teachers in the school, kindergarten to yr 6 and some parents including mine. I had to say my poem that I had written in class. It was a poem on music and I remember part of it quite well. "The clouds were thin, as dark as night, and all the people lay in fright." After I said that everyone was laughing. I looked down and down the side of my leg was all wet and there was wee all over the floor in a puddle underneath me. I was so embarrassed. Rodney

Once at school I was walking with some pencils when suddenly my friend pushed out her chair and I fell over! One guy in my class started laughing and then the rest went along too! I tried to laugh along with them but it was totally embarrassing! My best friend didn't even know what happened. Plus, the pencils I had weren't the ones I wanted so I went through all that for pencils I didn't need. Total embarro! :(Sarah
